Mr. Gunter told Mr. Beach's lawyers that he did not consider Mrs. Beach his witness; that the grand Jury could summon any one it cares to, but that he certainly would not advise Mrs. Beach to go before the eighteen men who he expects to return a true bill against her husband. Mr. Gunter said this afternoon that the notive of Mr. Beach's course was very evident.

B. R. Penderson. Beach's attorney, mid that Mr. Beach will proposity start for America next week. He did not think that his chient will want a preliminary scanningtion.

In reply to his request of the Governor that he allowed to draw upon the Governor's contingent trung for money with which to continue the investigation and to possibly employ an attorney to aid him in the presecution of Mr. Beach, Solicitor Gunter received a letter to-day from Gov. Blease stating that assistance will be given, but that the Governor did not indicate is what extent. Unless comething unforced happens Judge Robert Wilson, of the Thirq Judicial circuit of South Carolina, will preside at the September term of General Session Court, when Mr. Beach, rather than stand trial, will enter a ples to the minor charge of assault and lattery of a high and aggravated nature, is held by many Aiken folks.

BOOKLOVERS ASK MANY QUESTIONS

Seek to Gain Advantage Over Competitors by "Finer Points of Scoring."

The Booklover' Contest is progressing to the point where complex inquiries are reaching. The Weshington Herald office, and some of them present problems which call for rulings outside of the special conditions surrounding the competition. Most of the inquiries arise from the fact that some contestants desire to gain an advantage over their opponents through some of the "facer points of the scoring," as one of them puts it. Double-less the most novel loquiry which has yet been presented is the following: "Should a contestant send in five correct answers to each pictures and send in five pictures, each have any advantage over a contestant who sent in five anawers to each picture, four of which were wrong and one the right answer? The following spawer was sent to this inquirer: "Such a contestant would be at a de-

"Such a contestant would be at a decided disadvantage, as there is no reason for sending in similar answers to any picture, because when the final count is made it two contestants have the same number of correct inswers the one using the less coupons would be declared the winner, and consequently there is nothing to be gained by increasing the ounder of coupons used by duplicate answer of coupons used by duplicate answer of coupons the differential of the coupons to declared the coupons is an unincreasing the coupons to duplicate answers as an unincreasing handicap to onneed."

Another point has come up regarding the exact answers sent in on the puzzles, and added coupons for duplicate answers is an unincreasing handicap to onneed."

Another point has come up regarding the exact answers sent in on the puzzles. When two or more publishers issue books with the same title, and if the name of either author is correct, both will be accepted in the count as correct. For example, there are two different books with the title of "The Crisis." One is by Winston Churchill and the other by Mark Lee Luther. In either case, the contestant sending in the name of either author obviously sends in the correct answer.
